The university and the city

Bratislava is a historic city, which has grown out of its past as a free royal coronation town. Visitors will find the ancient castle in the centre as well as the castle Devín, many reconstructed palaces, fountains, gothic churches and romantic narrow alleyways. Students can enjoy various events during the whole year and a good atmosphere in the city. Bratislava is situated in Central Europe at the borders of three countries, neighbouring with Hungary in the south and Austria in the west. It is only 60 kilometres from the Austrian capital Vienna. One can make trips around Slovakia (offering beautiful mountains, medieval castles and towns, healing spas and adrenaline sports) or travel around Europe, as we are situated in the heart of Europe. Thesis

Research areas:

- The first research area deals with a brief introduction to the nature and content of human rights, explanation of differences between absolute and relative human rights, discussion about the so-called “ticking bomb scenario“, outline of the limitation clauses in constitutional law of USA and European States, etc. All issues are accompanied by review and interactive discussion of practical examples.
- The essential points of the second research area consider the question of interplay between competition law and human rights. This topic shall solve possible conflicts of the European human rights law and the agenda of competition law. Between the practical institutes of discussion belong: privilege against self-incrimination, conduct of inspections, access to file and protection of confidential information, conduct of oral hearing, etc.
- The third research is proposed to deal with: Impact of the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union on Development of Human Rights Law. The work should be focused on the influence of the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union on the system of protection of human rights in Europe. Especially, the fact should be examined that the European Union, by Lisbon Treaty, declared its will to access to the European Convention on Human Rights. This fact opens a lot of interesting questions, such as the relation of the Charter to the Convention and, more specifically, of the Court of Justice of the EU to the European Court of Human Rights. The possible conflict of interpretation between these judicial institutions and its solutions may also be examined in the work, as well as the procedural aspects of the EU accession to the Convention.

The fourth research: Surveillance in New Europe. Thesis is to investigate new surveillance techniques in former post-communist countries in Europe. Which legal and political problems arise from the new type of surveillance? How are these problems addressed in formal law and how are they implemented? How do they impact basic rights and freedoms? “
