The university and the city

The Faculties of Law and Political Science and Medicine are among the oldest in France. They were created at the same time as those of Bologna in Italy. The Faculty of Law has around 9000 students from the first year to post-doctorate. Three main departments are represented: Law (public, private and international Law), History Law and Political Science. The Faculty of Law is located in the historical center of Montpellier, which is entirely pedestrian.

The Faculty provides to the students access to libraries, both the general library with all the catalogues and the specialized ones (for instance the Human Rights European Law Institute holds a very rich collection of books and reviews, both in French and English, concerning aspects of protection of human rights).

The city is located in south of France between the mountains of "Cevennes" and the Mediterranean Sea. The weather is quite warm from April to the end of October. A tramway can easily bring the students outside the center, even close to the sea which is about 10 miles from the city. Very practical information can be seen on: www.montpellier.fr and <http://www.ot-montpellier.fr/en/> (in English).

Political Science (both at bachelor and Master levels). All courses are in French.¹ The EMA students can attend courses freely in other fields (science, history, sociology, etc.). All the programs for the second semester can be found on <http://droit.edu.umontpellier.fr/formations>. More informations can be received from Prof. Christophe Maubernard. All the courses are 30 hours (main courses) or 20 hours (seminars).

Deadline for enrolment in the courses: For the 2018 second semester the courses will begin on Monday 15th of January and will end on Saturday 14th of April. The EMA students can foresee a week off (from 26th of February to 6th of March). The students from Venice can expect also to receive, as they arrive later, a resume of courses by professors.

Examination procedures: Oral examination. The examinations take place most of the time between the end of April and the end of May. The EMA students are enrolled under “Erasmus” status. Each course is 6 ECTS, which means in accordance with EMA convention, that the EMA students are expected to choose at least 2 general courses (and more if interested).

Specific resources

In order to facilitate their arrival and their stay, the Institute will set at its expenses some specific costs for photocopies, French language courses, and if justified some travel expenses. Two years ago, the Faculty has also signed a convention with one of the student residences, which is about 10 minutes’ walk from the Faculty and has very competitive prices (this residence was closed this year but will be re-opened next academic year).

Thesis

Research areas:

• International and European Human Rights Law.

Subjects which could be supervised for next academic year (not exhaustive):

- EU development policy and Human Rights (new Consensus)
- Rights to animals are fundamental ones?
- Democracy and Human Rights (or populism and human rights)
- International/European Financial System and Human Rights
- EU’ “new generation” agreements with third countries and Human Rights

Thesis supervision: One of the Professors from the Institute.

According to the new Status of the EMA program, the students for the second semester in Montpellier write their thesis in English.

Number of copies to hand in at the hosting university: (+ 1 copy to the EMA Secretariat): 2

Library

The University and libraries are generally open from 8 am to 7 pm. An access card will be delivered to each EMA student for using all the equipment.

Administration and logistics

Information concerning visa arrangements: The national governmental website for all questions about legal conditions to stay in France is France-Diplomatie: www.diplomatie.gouv.fr (the website is available in English).

As national requirements have been strengthened with the état d’urgence (state of emergency) non-EU residents’ students should be very careful about their visa and the French procedure for their stay.

¹ The Human Rights European Law Institute which officially receives the EMA students provides computers and books. Nevertheless, the professors involved in the academic program of Venice all speak in English and will deliver advice and information for the exams in English. It can be seen also as an opportunity to improve French language, which remains a diplomatic one.
